I want to learn more about how to have effective scrums and sprints, and how the work pace changes including these. How the Google Maps API works, and how long it will take to get used to working with react and web development for the first time.

I have to learn how to work with people more knowledgeable than me in areas that I haven't explored yet. I'm a slow learner without motivation, and I'm really motivated to learn more about web development and the uses of Google's APIs. Since all seem to be somewhat new to react this will probably be a good work experience.

My contribution to the scrum team is to provide a clear vision of what we're working with and make sure that we're not missing details and can focus on the work that needs to be done.

My contributions to the teams deliveries has so far been trying to get to all the meetings and communicate as much as we can to reach the designated goal.
